Between the Water & the Woods presents us the story of Emeline, a girl with a hidden magical power connected to earth. We follow her journey with other characters. One of the characters is her father which was something I'd never read before in YA (Teenagers usually stay away from parental figures and I was glad because the author included a constant/present parental figure).

There is a very detailed description of it in Between the Woods and the Water (pp 27, 29, 32 in the paperback edition). As we have written before: Úri utca (Lord's Street) is at the very heart of the Castle District and lining this ancient cobbled thoroughfare are the one-time palaces and townhouses of the old Hungarian nobility.
