Imagine spending the night – or longer – on a Colonial-era plantation in South Carolina. And then imagine staying in the original kitchen house or schoolhouse – updated, of course, with luxurious amenities and accommodations. The nostalgia and historic charm of this South Carolina bed and breakfast will lure you in, but the astounding beauty and location will make you never want to leave the most unique “hotel” in the Palmetto State.

Do you believe in ghosts? We do, and we are spending a night at the Myrtles Plantation in St. Francisville, Louisiana. The Myrtles was built in 1796 on a Spanish Land Grant near the Mississippi River. It is advertised as and has a reputation of being one of America's most haunted homes! Statues are common at most plantation homes.

An older retired couple gave up a week in Mexico to spend the night in the Myrtles Plantation. Nothing happened to them, but they said they had a wonderful stay and would gladly return again. A younger couple (late 20's ish) couldn't convince any of their friends to come stay at the Myrtles with them, but they made it through the night without incident.
