In Arthurian legend, the Fisher King, also known as the Wounded King or Maimed King, is the last in a long bloodline charged with keeping the Holy Grail. Versions of the original story vary widely, but he is always wounded in the legs or groin and incapable of standing. All he is able to do is fish in a small boat on the river near his castle, Corbenic, and wait for some noble who might be able to heal him by asking a certain question. In later versions, knights travel from many lands to try to

Although the personal name of the maimed king varies he is frequently referred to as "The Fisher King" or in some later texts, "The Rich Fisher". Occasionally the Fisher King is the son or grandson of the maimed king. So why is he the Fisher king? In the Cretian De Troyes version, he is certainly fishing when he meets up with Perceval. This Fisher King has been wounded with a spear through the thighs. He can no longer ride but he can still enjoy fishing!.

The Fisher King | Story Archaeology

Interestingly, The Fisher King only gets relief from his pain when he is fishing, meaning, doing reflective work on himself. The Fisher King's kingdom has been laid to waste, the meadows and flowers are dried up and the waters shrunken. The suggestion is that any malaise to the king is mirrored in his kingdom.

In 1275, the Fisher King and the hermit followed the Lady of the Lake to Lac Célavry in Toussaint. He most likely transported common, but worthy folks on the island to the Lady's islet, and collected herbs. He was not a very talkative guy, and managed to communicate mostly with a series of Mhm's and Uhm's, except for when motivated to talk.
